As of April 2022, the Minnesota Attorney General filed a lawsuit against Wolf River Electric, along with several other solar companies, alleging deceptive sales practices including misrepresenting cost savings, using high-pressure tactics, and tricking consumers into signing contracts by calling them "paperwork.". The lawsuit seeks restitution for affected consumers and penalties against the companies. Currently, there haven't been any major updates regarding the outcome of the lawsuit against Wolf River Electric, but you can check the Minnesota Attorney General's website for the latest information.

Key points about the lawsuit:

Allegations:

The lawsuit claims Wolf River Electric and other solar companies misled customers about the cost savings of solar panels, used aggressive sales tactics, and made false promises about electricity bill reductions.

Consumer impact:

Many homeowners reportedly signed contracts with Wolf River Electric believing they were simply providing information, only to later discover they were legally bound to a solar installation.

Potential outcomes:

If the lawsuit is successful, affected consumers may be eligible for refunds or contract cancellations, and Wolf River Electric could face financial penalties.
